[O]ne should not overlook 'We, The People's' Mission Statement from The Declaration of Independence that describes our enduring domestic purpose:

'We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed, by their Creator, with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.'

Unfortunately for us today, the meanings of some of these words have been degraded by judicial case law. [F]or now it is necessary to re-establish The Founders' intent of the nation's Mission Statement by adding the following modifiers:

*We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed, by their Creator, with certain unalienable Rights, chief among these are all Human Life, all Moral Liberties, and only Lawful, non victimizing pursuits.

... Perhaps 'pursuit of Happiness' should not only mean eternal Happiness in Jesus, The Messiah; but also mean, the pursuit of the preservation of all Life and moral Liberties! - rek,
